5TH SUNDAY OF EASTER

On Hawaii's island of Oahu, visitors to Diamond Head can choose to climb to the top from inside the crater which forms the famous landmark. Although the hike is only eight-tenths of a mile, the path winds back and forth over rocks and dirt, culminating in a 200-step stairway and a stooped walk through a dimly lit tunnel. Sweating, out of breath, one emerges at the top, to one of the most beautiful vistas in the world.

"I am the way, the truth, and the life," Jesus tells his disciples in today's Gospel reading from John. "No one comes to the Father except through me." Our path has been made clear for us, and although we can see the reward at the end, we still must look down at each step along that path in order to keep our footing. We can reach that reward, but only if we allow Jesus to guide us every step of the way.

Every person faces unique problems and opportunities. God has a reason for setting things up that way. A wise pastor once said: "I bless God because he has allowed a thousand problems and difficulties to come into my life. They have made me grow in character and in faith."

The Catechism of the Catholic Church teaches us that the Word of God is a light for our path. We must assimilate it in faith and prayer and put it into practice. This is how moral conscience is formed. On this fifth Sunday of Easter, we should remember that Christ cleared the most difficult path for us through his Passion and resurrection and now offers to take our hand along the way.

5. VAZMENA NEDJELJA

Isus prije nego će se rastati od učenika ostavlja im duhovnu oporuku. Nešto kao duhovni adrenalin da ih drži kad ga ne budu gledali. Govor mu je prilično zakučast. Priča o nekakvim stanovima koje ide pripremiti, pa kako odlazi da se vrati... I k tomu podrazumijeva da oni znaju kamo odlazi, premda nitko od učenika nije shvatio što on priča. I kakvi su, odnosno kakvi smo - prihvatili bi to zdravo za gotovo; onako kako smo navikli slušati pobožne propovijedi o čijem sadržaju nemamo pojma. Ali, srećom, tu je Toma koji svojom brutalnim poštenjem prekida govor: "Ne znamo kamo odlaziš. Kako onda možemo put znati?" Toma traži jasnoću, zemljopisnu kartu, i točan opis tog njegovog puta. Nije podanik koji tek klima glavom. A tko samo klima, brzo zaspe. Sveti ljudi se ne boje biti netaktični, usude se pitati i kad to izgleda neprimjereno. Marija nije tek klimnula na anđelovu vijest - nego kao jaka žena daje svoju primjedbu: "A kako će to biti kad ja muža ne poznajem?" Jasna pitanja, daju jasne odgovore. Toma je svojim pitanjem od Isusa isprovocirao snažnu i duboku istinu, koja odjekuje kroz svu vječnost: "Ja sam Put, Istina, i Život."

Primijetimo, nije kazao: "Ja sam jedan od putova, jedna od istina, i jedan od stilova života." Ne, već da je on JEDINI. Nije jedan u nizu duhovnih velikana koji objavljuju otajstvo Boga, već on sam je Bog. On sam je Put, Istina, i Život - onaj koji sve druge religije traže, i djelomično objavljuju. Jer, "Nema, uistinu pod nebom drugoga imena dana ljudima po kojemu se možemo spasiti." (Dj 4, 12) Bez Puta nema putovanja. Bez Istine nema znanja. Bez Života nema življenja. Tko putuje tamo gdje nema puta, ide u ništa. No, makar i bili na putu, važno se upitati jesmo li na pravom. Jer, kako kaže sv. Toma Akvinski, bolje je na pravom putu šepati, nego na krivom trčati.

Isus je pravi put, ali ne na način da bi govorio kamo nam je ići, već on sam nas vodi. Slijediti ga znači spokojno za njim ići, imajući povjerenja da će nas vodi cilju.

HARVARD EUCHARISTIC PROCESSION

The decision of a student group at Harvard University to host a "black mass" on its campus precipitated a massive response from Catholics around Boston, the United States, and even the world. I've heard of parishes all over the United States who held Holy Hours at the time of the scheduled event at Harvard. I participated in a magnificent Eucharistic procession from the campus of MIT to St. Paul's in Harvard Square. Hundreds of Catholics followed the Eucharistic Lord down the main street in Cambridge where thousands of onlookers witnessed the flock following the Eucharistic Good Shepherd.

I'm not always a huge fan of "big events" because I feel like those things can be used as a substitute for true faith. Sometimes they feel as though the effort that goes into planning and executing them far outweighs the benefits. They can feel designed as a publicity stunt or as a way of evoking a strong emotional reaction, but the effects seem short-lived. Last night's Eucharistic procession had a different feel. As I looked about and saw the many young college students from area universities participating, I was touched by their love for the Eucharist and their sincere desire to follow Christ.

During the past year, one thing that has really struck me about the college students whom I encounter every day is their Eucharistic faith. Quite often, as I am standing outside of church on a Sunday before Mass, I am asked, "Father, do you have time for a quick confession?" Similarly, for thirty minutes each day before Daily Mass, I hear confessions. It is rare for there to be a day that nobody comes. I also notice this at Mass itself. At every Sunday Mass, there are young people who come up in the communion line and ask for a blessing rather than receive the Eucharist. Presumably, having examined their conscience, they do not want to receive the Eucharist until they have received the Sacrament of Penance.

I find all of this very striking. These young people are not scrupulous or legalistic. They are not tied up in knots. Instead, they strike me as being young people who simply love the Lord and who want to approach Him and receive Him with devotion and with love. Their love for the Eucharist and the ease with which they approach the Sacrament of Penance is a beautiful witness to Christ and His Grace. I benefit from their example.

All of this comes to mind for me today as I think about the "big event" of the Eucharistic procession and the blasphemous "satanic mass" that precipitated it. I am reminded of my own need to deepen continually my devotion to the Eucharist. These events beckon all of us to examine ourselves and to renew our love for the Blessed Sacrament. Do I love the Eucharist? Do I live a life that is coherent with the Eucharist that I receive? Do I humbly examine myself before approaching to receive the Eucharist? Do I spend time in prayer before the Blessed Sacrament and make visits to be with the Lord in the Eucharist? Do I receive the Eucharist with reverence or am I distracted, careless, or even willful?

In this instance, the "big event" ought to cause all of us who are Catholic to become more coherent in our life. While we were rightly outraged at the intended sacrilege of the Eucharist by others, we ought to make certain that we do not simply become "protesters" in our relationship to the Eucharist. Instead, we ought to become more Eucharistic in our daily life. This "big event" ought to deepen our desire to grown in Eucharistic intimacy. We want to make sure that we ourselves are not sacrilegious, blasphemous, or careless.

I think the "big event" of the Eucharistic procession will bear the most fruit if it is followed by Catholics everywhere examining our own consciences and humbly confessing our sins and receiving absolution. For me, the Eucharist procession was an amazing witness of people showing their love for the Eucharist. In my life, however, the far more powerful and convincing witness of Eucharistic Faith is seeing the daily procession of college students making their way to the confessional.
