WEEKLY MEDITATION — 11th Sunday in Ordinary Time

When Jesus looked at people, He didn't see a crowd; He saw individuals, each with problems and worries, joys and sorrows. Far from despising them because of their sins, He had compassion on them precisely because they were wounded and in need. He gave Himself to them first of all, but then, knowing how great the harvest was, He decided to summon helpers. From His followers He chose twelve to be His friends and companions in a special way. He named them apostles — people who are sent. They were from different backgrounds and none of them was trained. Each had his own character, foibles, weaknesses, and strengths. There were tensions and rivalries among them. Jesus loved them and they loved Him in return. He trained them, not, however, in a formal way, but by living with them, walking with them, being a model for them. They learned to do things as He did them. Then He sent them out to others. They knew what their mission was: they were to be agents of His compassion to others, especially to the poor and the suffering.

Choice is a privilege and an honor, but it is also a responsibility. The apostles were chosen for a task—to help Christ with the harvest. Though the harvest is immense, there is no need to be discouraged. Today Jesus depends on us. Through baptism we too are chosen. In order to become an apostle of the Lord it is not necessary to be an exceptional person. All one needs is willingness and an open heart. We can't do everything, but we can do something.

St. Anthony

On Monday, June 13, the feast of St. Anthony, a special outdoor mass will be held at the Croatian Franciscan Monastery on Drexel Blvd (49th Street between Ellis and Drexel). at 7 p.m. Everyone is welcome to celebrate the feast day of this beloved saint.

Congratulations

Congratulations to our former student and good parishioner Ana Maria Vasilj on making the Dean's List at DePaul University (Liberal Arts and Sciences). We are proud of her academic success. God bless you, Ana Maria.

WISDOM'S CORNER How do you see people?

Once upon a time there was a king who called one of his servants. This servant was known to be a cruel, mean man who had no friends. The king said to him, 'I want you to travel throughout my kingdom and find a truly good person.' The man went. In the course of his travels he met and spoke with a great number of people. However, after a long time he returned to the king saying, 'I have searched the whole kingdom, but I couldn't find even one truly good person. All of them are mean, cruel, and evil. The good person you seek is nowhere to be found.'

The king called another servant. This man was known for his generosity and kindness and was loved by everyone. The king said to him, 'Go and travel throughout my kingdom and find for me a truly wicked person.' The man traveled far and wide in search of a wicked person. After a long time he returned to the king saying, 'I have failed in the task you gave me to do. I found people who are misguided, misled, and who act in blindness or passion, but nowhere could I find a truly evil person. All of them are good at heart, despite the bad things they have done.'

We see people, not as they are, but as we are.

THOUGHT OF THE WEEK

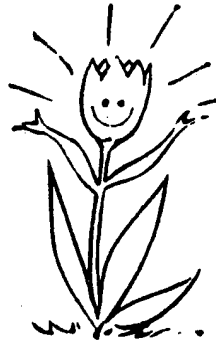

"You are the same today as you'll be in five years except for two things, the people you meet and the books you read."

A Reflection on the Family (from our parishioner)

Why are we so close to our family? Is it because we are related by blood, or is it because we lived with them and spend so much time with them on holidays? And what's the big deal with people who think being close to families is such a great thing?

I wonder about that. I mean the easy thing is to say, "Yeah, I suppose they're my family, and they'll be there for me. And if I can, I'll be there for them." But, come on, they are what they are. I mean a few of them can be quite annoying. I have friends that I'm closer to than family. And really, I'd rather stay at home than spend the day with most of them. Listen, one of my friends doesn't have any family and they're just fine. Or maybe not.

We should not be self-centered, self-sufficient, self-anything. Humans need relationships to function; they need family. So, next time you do something for a family member and he or she smiles at you, look closer. At the soul of that smile is God smiling and thanking you for being a better person. A. G.

REMINDER

Summer is coming. Warmer weather is already here. Every special place has its own code of proper behavior and attire. That is why we ask you to please respect the sacred worship place, our church, and dress respectfully for mass. Thank you for your understanding and regard!
